What are our ambitions in the near future? The answer is simple— either augmenting our formal education, or being employed by a privately owned company or by the armed forces. It is easy for us to answer a question pertaining to the next four years, but what will we do with our lives over the next ten or even twenty years? This question is an ominous one, but why should it arouse such a feeling of uncertainty within us? We should feel confident in the solid foundation of learning and experience which we have acquired over the last few years. Our formal education has widened and extended our intellectual horizons. Our view point has broadened. Our activities have prepared us for the contact with people which we will have throughout our life. Our extra-curricular program has taught us the need for teamwork—that vital quality which we must have to live in peaceful coexistence with our neighbors. Our participation in school life has given us the best education possible—that of experience.

We are constantly forging our personalities, learning to increase our strengths and discipline our weaknesses, setting more mature standards. Today we are classed as adolescents; in four years we will be old enough to vote—in four years we will be called adults. What heights will we attain in the next twenty years? We will become worthy replacements of those who maintain responsible positions in adult life. We will be tomorrow's hope.

ADMINISTRATION

PRINCIPAL'S MESSAGE

To you, the Class of 1957, has been given your country's priceless heritage from which have come all the opportunities thus far presented to you and from which will come the even greater opportunities that the future holds for everyone of you.

Your yearbook, with its accent on "Futurama" is definitely pointing toward this future of yours. All of it lies before you to explore, to build, to control for the peace and welfare of all peoples. May your school experiences, under the guidance and instruction of your teachers, have awakened in you the intellectual curiosity and the steadfast purpose that will enable you to make your future all you and we hope and pray it will be. Our confidence is entrusted to you, who must be the creators and trustees of Futurama.

God bless you all!

Brad, Carol, Pam, and Ted receive their hard-earned food—praise for a job well done.

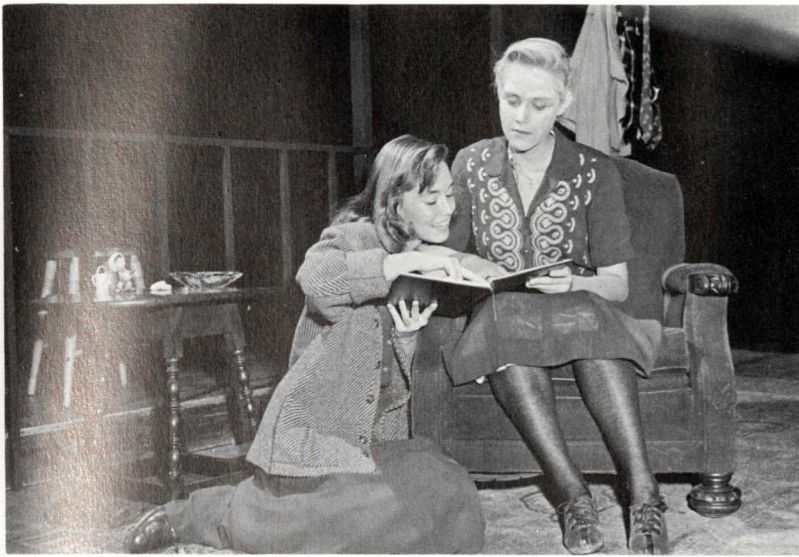

PEOPLE!! What have you been doing to Mr. Crockett?!

Janet demonstrates the power of positive pointing!

Two girls fussing over him—and Brad looks scared!

"Look, Mother, there he is!"

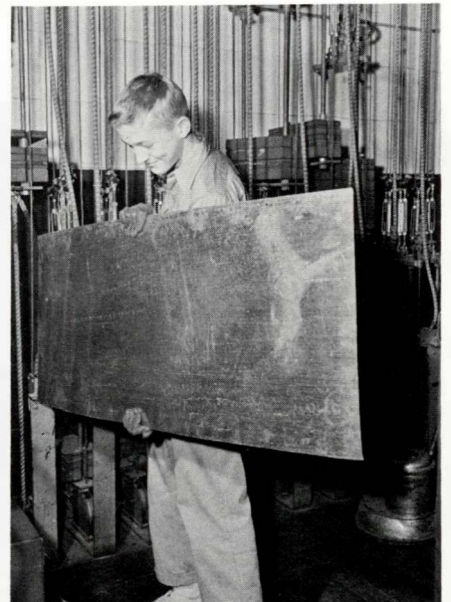

Ted stages fright . . .

Principles were involved in this "dual!"

This is no "once over lightly." job—ask Mimi, Joe, and Joyce!

Mal shakes up a storm!
